DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

- 1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
- 2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
- 3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
- 4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 1 and 3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yoshinori et al. in view of Applicant's admitted prior art.

As per claim 1, Yoshinori et al. teaches a seat air conditioner means for producing air blowing from a seat of a vehicle (Figure 2). Yoshinori does not teach the manual/automatic control learning means as recited. However, as admitted by Applicant, it is old and well-known in the air conditioning control art that "when the control condition is changed by user's manual switch operation during the automatic control, the changed control condition is learned. Further it is reflected in the control characteristic of the automatic control..." (paragraph [0004]). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to apply such controls to the seat air blowing arrangement of Yoshinori et al. for the common purpose of improving passenger comfort, and further since such control learning systems are broadly applicable and the vehicle seat is simply one application where it might be applied

Art Unit: 3744

As per claim 3, official notice is taken that air volume and temperature are common and typical control parameters of air conditioning systems (see for example Applicant's cited documents JP 3111566 regarding controlling air quantity and JP 31465763 regarding controlling air temperature) that would have been obvious to control for the similar purpose of improving passenger comfort.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 2 and 4-9 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Claims 10-14 are allowed.
